Celebrate the Arts!

The Series at Second Presbyterian Church 2011-2012

Second Presbyterian Church is pleased to present its ninth season of Celebrate the Arts. Join us on four Sunday afternoons for some of the most beautiful artistic expression in our culture. The beloved Eaken Piano Trio is a wonderful way to start a season. Second Presbyterian's Music Director Andy Hoke, bass-baritone, will perform with pianist Jay DeWire in our second concert. We will hear more from the talented Hoke family in the third concert as Aaron Hoke, baritone, performs with his wife, Rebecca Hoke, soprano, and Reese Revak, piano. Our last program of the season is the world reknown Central Pennsylvania Youth Ballet, presented at CPYB's Warehouse Studios in Carlisle.

Free admission, free child care, and glorious music and dance. Join us!

Andy came to Second Presbyterian in 2002 after an eight-year stint teaching public school vocal and general music, and he hasn't looked back. His principal instrument is voice, but he also is an accomplished pianist and organist. He has a bachelor's degree from Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N.J. in music theory and composition, a teaching certificate from Lebanon Valley College, and master's level credits in humanities and business.

Jay DeWire is an active soloist, accompanist, orchestral pianist, and a member of the West Shore Piano Trio. Recent performance highlights include a performance of Brahms' Piano Concerto in B-flat Major with the Prince George's Philharmonic; performances with the West Shore Piano Trio in Lenna Hall, Chautauqua, NY, the Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C., An Die Musik in Baltimore, MD, and St. Mary's Hall, St. Mary's College of Maryland.

Reese Revak

Aaron is also a graduate of Westminster Choir College and studied with nationally renowned baritone Elem Eley. He has performed as a chorus member and soloist in many different choral groups, singing repertoire ranging from the Renaissance to works recently composed. He is currently the baritone soloist and section leader of Christ Church in Philadelphia and is a music teacher with the School District of Philadelphia. Both Rebecca and Aaron sing recital and opera in Cleveland and Philadelphia. Reese Revak, a Philadelphia area pianist, will accompany them.

Diabelli Variations

Marcia Dale Weary's love of dance compelled her to open Marcia Dale Weary's School of Classical Ballet-now Central Pennsylvania Youth Ballet-in 1955. Throughout the years, CPYB has developed a curriculum that is focused on building technical strength, stamina and flexibility, as well as nurturing artistic development. One of the most prolific schools in the country, CPYB continues to produce dancers for the top companies in the world, including American Ballet Theatre, New York City Ballet, Boston Ballet, San Francisco Ballet, Pacific Northwest Ballet, Pennsylvania Ballet, and Paul Taylor Dance Company, to name only a few. The program will be mixed repertoire. Please note: this performance will be held off-site at the CPYB Warehouse Studios in Carlisle.
